For those who have never attended, it is a chance to get together for members to get together outside and work on trees which need potting, styling, or other help.

It is also a time to buy and sell trees, pots, etc. from fellow members and buy and screen bark mulch and other material we need for the year.

Bonsai Prime Directives & Universal Truths

“ Dead trees are the tuition you pay for learning bonsai” ... John Naka

Rule #1. - The expression “roots easily from a cutting” is a term which is a term which applies to everyone but you.

Rule # 2. - In a workshop situation ... your wire becomes community proerty.

Rule # 3. - Rule 2 also applies to your tools.

Amendment to Rule #3. - Wire, is the first thing that anyone who borrows your new, seventy-five dollar, stainless steel, concave cutter will attempt to sever. If this individual has no wire available, they will either borrow some (see rule #2) or attempt to cut rocks in the soil mass.

Rule #4. - Fertilizing a bonsai has exactly the same effect upon local weather conditions as washing your car.

Rule #5. - Wisteria, Mume, Crab Apple and Crape Myrtle will bloom easily and in profusion for everyone. (This statement does not apply to you.)

Rule #6. - If two trees are collected side by side, on the same day and given identical care, one will eventually live and one will die. The tree that dies will not only be the best of the two specimens from a design standpoint, but will also be the one with the best root system.

Rule #7. - If the tree you choose to collect from the wild has no root system, you will become aware of this fact only after having lugged a 50 pound “root ball” comprised mostly of wet mud at least one mile down the side of a mountain or through extensive patches of thorn bushes and loose rock.

Rule # 8. - When wiring a bonsai, if you carefully measure the length of a branch and then allow about a third more wire you will always wind up either: a: two inches too short or, b: four inches too long.

Rule #9. - Japanese beetles consider bonsai to be “home cooking”.

Rule #10. - Automatic watering systems will always work perfectly until you leave the house.
